“Milord Goffredo”

Geoffrey Bolwell was a Dunedin butcher who became “a bloody legend” in a small northern Italian town in WWII. Geoffrey hid in a cave for two years after twice escaping from his German captors. During this time he was looked after by a kind and courageous Italian family who nicknamed him ‘Milord Goffredo’.

Jan will talk about the genealogical research she carried out to learn about her father, and how she came to write a play about his WWII exploits. She will include some filmed excerpts from her stage show.

Genealogy advice will be available.
